When couples make the journey through their first year of parenthood they confront their new responsibilities with varying amounts of support and a range of personal resources. When Couples Become Parents examines the ways in which divisions based on gender evolve and are challenged by heterosexual couples' transition from late pregnancy through early parenthood.

Following the experiences of forty heterosexual couples from various socio-economic backgrounds, Bonnie Fox traces the intricate interplay of social and material resources in the negotiations that occur between partners, the resulting divisions of paid and unpaid work in their families, and the interpersonal dynamics in their relationships. Exploring the diverse reactions of these women and men, When Couples Become Parents provides significant insights into the early stages of parenthood, the limitations of nuclear families, and the gender inequalities that often develop with parenthood.

Bonnie Fox is a professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of Toronto.
